

Public sector internal auditors have ample opportunity to increase their focus on cybersecurity. Less than half of survey respondents from the public sector in North America indicate they have a mandate from their boards/audit committees to audit cybersecurity. Similarly, less than half say they use a framework designed to address cybersecurity risk. Most surprising, one-third of respondents say no internal audit services are provided related to cybersecurity. Find out more about the ACGA at www.theiia.org/ACGA.

Does internal audit have a mandate from the board/audit committee to audit cybersecurity?

Does your organization use a framework designed to address cybersecurity risk?

Who provides cybersecurity-related internal audit services for your organization?

Respondent Demographics

